About Burnett

The name Burnett probably comes from the old English baernet meaning a place cleared by burning. There is evidence of a Roman settlement here. In 1102 the village came under Tewkesbury Abbey and the monks stopped here to worship at St Michael's church en route to Glastonbury.

After the Dissolution, Burnett passed to a wealthy Bristol merchant, John Cutte, commemorated in a brass in the chancel of the church. Another Bristol merchant, John Whitson, bequeathed Burnett in trust to found the country's oldest surviving girl's school, Red Maids. The school choir still periodically performs in the church here.

Refreshments: There are no facilities in the village. The Compton Inn in Compton Dando and Wheatsheaf Inn at Corston Fields are close, and there are many inns, cafes and restaurants in Keynsham.
